Summer School 2024

Democracy and Climate Justice

Palermo, 1-6 July, 2024

University of Palermo – Department of Law
Via Maqueda, 172 – 90134, Palermo

The PhD courses in “Human Rights: Evolution, Protection, and Limits”, “Legal Pluralisms: Ancient and Current Perspectives”, “Gender Studies”, and “Ecological Transition”, in collaboration with the Center for Sustainability and Ecological Transition, the master's program in “Law and Techniques of Ecological Transition”, and the Erasmus+ Project “Climate Justice Living Lab” of the University of Palermo, are organizing the Summer School entitled: Democracy and Climate Justice (hereinafter referred to as: Summer School).

ART. 1 – GENERAL INDICATIONS

I – PREMISE

The relationship between democracy and climate justice plays a crucial role in the contemporary time, characterized by growing awareness of the global challenges linked to climate change. Democracy, as a fundamental principle of modern political systems, constitutes the fertile ground upon which decisions and actions to mitigate environmental impacts and promote sustainability are based. However, the full realization of these goals requires a deep integration of democracy with climate justice, a concept that focuses on the equitable distribution of the burdens and benefits of climate actions.

Firstly, democracy provides an institutional framework where political participation and accountability are crucial for effectively addressing environmental issues. Fair access to information, transparency in decision-making processes, and the opportunity for citizens to express their opinions are essential elements for formulating inclusive and forward-thinking climate policies. In this context, democracy not only allows for a more faithful representation of the diverse voices and interests of society but also fosters the creation of policies that respond to the needs and concerns of all segments of the population.

However, democracy alone is not sufficient to ensure climate justice. Climate justice requires an integrated approach that considers not only environmental but also social and economic aspects. This implies recognizing existing inequalities in the capacity for climate adaptation and mitigation, as well as acknowledging the differentiated responsibilities between developed and developing countries in causing and addressing climate change.

Furthermore, climate justice demands a long-term vision that protects the rights of future generations and communities most vulnerable to climate impacts. Democracy, when adequately integrated with the principles of climate justice, can act as a catalyst for the adoption of policies and actions that promote environmental sustainability, social equity, and inclusion. Ultimately, the synergy between democracy and climate justice represents a moral and political imperative in addressing the challenge of climate change and building a resilient and sustainable future for all.

Interdisciplinarity will be the fundamental pillar of the Summer School. Through this approach, a pathway will be outlined based on the constant reference to human rights, allowing for the exploration of the mutual interaction between climate change and rights protection. The latter will not only be considered as negative constraints on public policies but as a fundamentally important element in the development process. The Summer School, therefore, aims to create an environment where it is possible to analyze the link between climate change and human rights, in order to promote solutions that effectively integrate both dimensions, thus contributing to a path of sustainable and rights-oriented development.

II – OBJECTIVES AND TOPICS

The Summer School, which will last six days, serves as an opportunity for in-depth exploration and debate on four topics of crucial importance in the current global context: the science of climate change, ecological transition, the sources of climate rights, and trends in climate jurisprudence. At a time when environmental issues are increasingly urgent, this initiative aims to provide a comprehensive exploration of the multifaceted aspects of climate change and strategies to address it.

The interdisciplinary approach adopted during the Summer School will allow for the analysis of the climate change issue from various perspectives, integrating scientific, political, legal, and social knowledge. Through seminars conducted by experts, participants will have the opportunity to gain a broader and deeper understanding of the factors contributing to climate change and possible solutions to effectively address it. Moreover, during the final two days of the Summer School, special space will be reserved to facilitate active participant engagement. Indeed, PhD students will have the opportunity to present their ideas and research through a dedicated call for abstracts on the theme of democracy and climate justice. This will enable them to share their perspectives and actively contribute to the academic debate on this crucial topic.

Furthermore, also during the final two days, the Summer School will offer the opportunity for direct engagement with environmental associations and non-governmental organizations active in the field of environmental protection and human rights. These meetings will be a valuable opportunity to establish constructive dialogue between young researchers, academic experts and activists, to share knowledge, experiences, and best practices, and to develop common strategies to address environmental challenges and promote concrete actions for a more sustainable and just society.

III - METHODOLOGY

As indicated in the attached program, each day will consist of two sessions discussing multiple specific topics from various theoretical and practical perspectives, aiming to achieve effective integration of methods and solutions. Speakers will suggest pre-reading materials to prepare participants for the topics under discussion, facilitating a deeper understanding and more fruitful discussion of the issues at hand. At the end of each seminar, there will be space for a debate involving all participants.

To ensure maximum participant engagement, the Summer School proceedings will include a Workshop titled “Democracy and Climate Justice: an interdisciplinary approach,” where works proposed and developed by the participants who answered the call for papers will be presented.

To participate as a speaker in the Workshop, please consult the call published on the following websites:

ART. 5 – THE WINTER SCHOOL COURSES

1. The Summer School will be divided into two parts.
In the first one, participants will need to study the reading materials – articles of both theoretical and practical nature, court decisions, official reports – which will be made available at least two weeks before the start of the Summer School, on the following websites:
 - Website of the PhD program in “Human Rights: Evolution, Protection, and Limits” at the University of Palermo
www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./dottorati/dirittiumanievoluzionetutelaelimitiinternazionale/
 - Dedicated page for the Erasmus+ project “Climate Justice Living Lab” on the website of the Department of Law at the University of Palermo
www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./progetti/cjll/
 - On the Living Lab platform of the Erasmus+ project “Climate Justice Living Lab”
 In the second one, participants will attend seminars and the Workshop, conducted by speakers from Italian and foreign universities, and engage in discussions with questions and answers based on the presentations and reading of educational materials.
2. The activities of the Summer School will take place in Palermo, Italy, at:
 - The premises of the Department of Law of the University of Palermo – Via Maqueda, 172, Palermo.
 - The Botanical Garden of Palermo of the University of Palermo – Via Lincoln n.2, Palermo.
 - The structure of the former Convent of the Reformed Fathers in Petralia Sottana - SP29, 90027 Petralia Sottana, metropolitan city of Palermo.
3. Participants will have full and free access to the library of the Department of Law.
4. Students who have participated in at least 90% of the seminars will receive a certificate, which corresponds to 6 ECTS, after passing an exam.

PHD WORKSHOP

“Democracy and Climate Justice: an interdisciplinary approach”

Petralia Sottana (PA), July 5th - 6th, 2024

University of Palermo, Department of Law
Via Maqueda, 172, 90134 – Palermo, Italy

Call for abstracts

ART. 1 – Object and purpose

The PhD programs in “Human Rights: Evolution, Protection, and Limits”, “Legal Pluralisms: Ancient and Current Perspectives”, “Gender Studies”, and “Ecological Transition”, in collaboration with the Center for Sustainability and Ecological Transition, the master's program in “Law and Techniques of Ecological Transition”, and the Erasmus+ Project “Climate Justice Living Lab” of the University of Palermo, are pleased to announce the PhD Workshop titled “Democracy and Climate Justice: an interdisciplinary approach”, to be held in Petralia Sottana (PA) on July 5th and 6th, 2024.

The activity will conclude the proceedings of the Summer School on “Democracy and climate justice”, which will take place at the same University from July 1st, 2024, to July 6th, 2024, and the program of which is available attached. Participation in the Workshop presupposes participation in the Summer School, according to the instructions contained in the relevant call available on the website:

- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/dipartimentogiurisprudenza/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./dottorati/dirittiumanievoluzionetutelaelimitiinternazionale/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./progetti/cjll/

ART. 2 – Objectives and Topics

The Summer School represents an opportunity for in-depth exploration and discussion on four crucial themes in the current global context: the science of climate change, ecological transition, sources of climate rights, and trends in climate jurisprudence. In an era where environmental issues are gaining increasing urgency, the aim of this initiative is to provide a chance to explore the various facets of climate change and strategies to address it.

The interdisciplinary approach adopted during the Summer School will allow the analysis of the issue of climate change from different perspectives, integrating scientific, political, legal, and social knowledge. Through seminars conducted by experts in the fields, participants will have the opportunity to gain a broad and in-depth understanding of the factors contributing to climate change and potential solutions to address it effectively.

Moreover, during the final two days of the Summer School, special sessions will be dedicated to promoting active engagement of the participants. PhD students will have the opportunity to present their ideas and research in a specific workshop on the theme of democracy and climate justice. This will allow them to share their perspectives and actively contribute to the academic debate on this crucial topic.

The Workshop will be characterized by the interdisciplinary nature of scientific discussion, allowing interested PhD students to propose solutions capable of addressing various aspects of the subject under examination, ranging from legal to economic, social, philosophical, and geopolitical profiles.

ART. 3 – Recipients of the call for abstracts

PhD students enrolled in the following PhD courses can participate in this call for abstracts:

- PhD course in “Human rights: evolution, protection and limits” of the University of Palermo.
- PhD course in “Legal pluralisms. Ancient and current perspectives” of the University of Palermo.
- PhD course in “Gender studies” of the University of Palermo.
- PhD course in “Ecological transition” of the University of Palermo.

PhD students from an Italian or foreign university are also eligible to participate in this call for abstracts, provided they are duly enrolled in the Summer School on “Democracy and Climate Justice”, which will take place at the University of Palermo from July 1st, 2024, to July 6th, 2024, according to the instructions contained in the respective call available at the following link.:

- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/dipartimentogiurisprudenza/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./dottorati/dirittiumanievoluzionetutelaelimitiinternazionale/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./progetti/cjll/

ART. 4 – Organization of the Workshop

The Workshop will take place within the Summer School on July 5, 2024 (Session I), from 2:30 PM to 5:00 PM, and on July 6, 2024 (Session II), from 9:00 AM to 12:00 PM, at the premises of the former Convent of the Reformed Fathers in Petralia Soprana (PA).

The Workshop will be conducted in English.

Further information regarding the organization of the activity will be provided following the selection of proposals.

ART. 5 – Selection of proposals and participation in the Workshop

All those interested in participating in the Workshop must send to the email address giulia.torta@unipa.it, no later than June 18, 2024:

1. the application form, completed in its entirety and signed, to be downloaded at the following link:

- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/dipartimentogiurisprudenza/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./dottorati/dirittiumanievoluzionetutelaelimitiinternazionale/
- www.unipa.it/dipartimenti/di.gi./progetti/cjll/

(please do not change the structure of the document).

2. the abstract, in English, of the proposal, with a maximum size of 500 words including any footnotes.
3. curriculum vitae et studiorum in Italian or English.
4. copy of a valid identity document.

All documents must be sent in “.pdf” format.

The subject of the e-mail must be the following: “Workshop Democracy and Climate Justice – Name and surname of the candidate”.

The proposal will be submitted, guaranteeing its anonymity, to the evaluation of the Scientific Committee which will comply with the following parameters:

- consistency of the proposal with respect to the themes of the Workshop, as defined by art. 1, par. 3.
- originality of the proposal.
- methodology.

The maximum number of proposals admitted will be 15.

The list of selected proposals will be notified by email to the interested parties by June 19, 2024.

Candidates will make sure they have received the communication.

CENTRO DI SOSTENIBILITÀ E TRANSIZIONE ECOLOGICA DI ATENEIO

PhD students whose proposals have been selected must confirm their participation in the Workshop no later than June 20, 2024, by sending an email to giulia.torta@unipa.it.

Each PhD student will have 10 minutes to present their paper, followed by a brief discussion.

Presenters may use a slideshow in “.ppt” format (Microsoft Office PowerPoint).

The selected and presented abstracts will be published in a dedicated section of the Living Lab platform of the Erasmus+ Project “Climate Justice Living Lab”. The papers, which will be submitted in their final version by a deadline that will be announced at the conclusion of the Workshop, will be collected, and published in a volume funded by the Erasmus+ Project “Climate Justice Living Lab”.

A contribution is provided to cover the total expenses incurred by PhD students for registration to the Summer School, which is a prerequisite for participating in the Workshop. You can request the contribution through the form (please do not modify the structure of the document) specifically prepared and attached to the Summer School call (Attachment 3).
